Normalization removes redundancy from relational tables.

A primary key uniquely identifies every row in a table.

Indexes speed up queries but slow down inserts and updates.

Transactions guarantee atomicity consistency isolation durability.